

1-877-889-9829 |

.com

High-Risk Industries:

Building a Culture of Safety

IMPLEMENTING a safety & health program can help employers avoid the

INDIRECT COSTS

that result from

WORKPLACE INCIDENTS

such as:

TIME LOST

due to work stoppages and investigations training and other costs associated with

REPLACING INJURED WORKERS

LOSS OR DAMAGE to material, machinery and property

These INDIRECT COSTS have been estimated to be at least 2.7 TIMES the direct costs.

Source: Leigh, J.P. (2011, Economic Burden of Occupational Injury and Illness in the United States. Millbank Quarterly, 89:728-772

Creating a safe work environment for employees in high-risk industries such as construction, healthcare, manufacturing and oil and gas, requires leaders to empower employees to stop unsafe practices.

It's not just about employees following the rules, but fostering a mindset where everyone prioritizes safety and feels comfortable reporting unsafe conditions or practices.

This is where a culture of safety flourishes.

Culture is learned through shared experiences. That's where Myron can help. Through our commitment to our customers, we use creativity to cultivate strong safety cultures.

Safety Recognition and Rewards

Positive reinforcement goes a long way. Implement programs recognizing and rewarding individuals and teams consistently demonstrating safe practices.

Safety Incentive Programs

Programs linking safety performance to gifts can be motivating, especially when the gift is an exclusive branded item only received when safety is practiced.

Safety Celebrations

Recognize milestones and achievements in safety through celebrating shared success. Use branded merch as keepsakes to reinforce the importance of safety.

Custom Safety Gear

Incorporate custom gear such as vests, hard hats, and scrubs with a company's logo to foster a sense of team identity and belonging. This can encourage employees to take better care of their equipment and wear it proudly.

6 Fun Ways to Promote and Incentivize Safety

1. Safety Bingo

2. Safety Recognition Board

3. Themed Safety Days

4. Safety Photo Contest

5. Safety Scavenger Hunt

6. Safety Escape Room

Let us help make safety rewarding.

Myron has the expertise to help your company create and enhance safety programs through branded merch, fulfillment and distribution, and creating online stores for your employees.

Contact us today to learn more about how we can help.

1-800-526-9766 or visit our website at Myron.com.